Discrimination in Taxes.

The committee recently appointed by the chamber of commerce to investigate bers, as well as on members who have not attained the age of forty years. The age limit has not been definitely decided upon, this point being left to a referendum of the members.

The old plan, which was an assessment of $1 on each member, on the death of a member of the association, and semi-annual assessments of $1 per member, is to be abandoned. The association has a fund of more than $13,000 in its treasury, and the semi-annual assessments, it was decided, are not necessary. The organization, according to reports made at last week's meeting, has about 1,300 members. boro, Va.; Rev. Elliott E. Burgess to the the chamber of commerce to investigate the alleged inequitable state tax assessment has just compiled a report showing that only twenty-nine counties in the state pay into the state treasury more the state. After the state's expenses are deducted the twenty-nine self-sustaining seventy-one cost the state exactly $592.

The nineteen cities self-sustaining pay a total of $1,804,464.04 into the state treasury. The largest drain on the state in point of loss last year was Carroll county costing the state last year a loss of $40,-534.70. Alexandria county shows a gain to the state of $11,658.71.
